Sales Playbook

How we turn service contractors into customers: find them, call them, run the demo, close, and get them live.

- 1 Identify
- 2 Cold Call
- 3 Demo & Trial
- 4 Close
- 5 Onboard

The sales motion

Five stages. Each has one job: move the prospect to the next stage.

Principles

- One goal per stage: always advance to the next.
- Lead with their pain (missed, after-hours calls), not features.
- CASL always: only published-email consent, footer on every email, honor opt-outs.
- Track every prospect's stage and outcome.
- The cold call sells the demo; the demo sells the service.

Tools we use

- Identify: the outreach tool + outreach/contacted.csv
- Demo & Trial: Zoom + the Dispango demo number
- Follow-up: the call recording + the lead-text screenshot
- Trials & onboarding: the admin tool (admin-ui → admin API)
- Legitimacy: the dispango.com website

01 Identify prospects

GOAL Build a steady list of service businesses worth calling locksmiths, home-service contractors, rental offices.

DO THIS

1. Pick one city or region; start local and Canadian.
2. Mine Google Maps + directories for business names (search alone misses locals).
3. Visit each business's own site; grab phone, published email, hours, services.
4. Log to outreach/contacted.csv; dedup by domain and email.
5. Prioritize 24/7, emergency, appointment-driven, owner-run businesses.

TIPS

- Use the /locksmith-outreach tool to find prospects and draft emails.
- Use the conspicuously published email only, never guess info@.
- Note one hook per prospect (after-hours claims, booking pages, reviews).
- Build a batch before you start dialing, because volume matters.
- Rental offices are a strong second vertical: the agent books apartment viewings.

Tool

/locksmith-outreach finds shops by city, grabs their published email, and creates ready-to-send Gmail drafts. The dedup ledger is outreach/contacted.csv; reruns check the ledger first.

02 Cold Call

Get a Zoom demo booked, ideally the same day, and nothing else.

DO THIS

1. Keep it under 10 minutes; the volume game is won here.
2. Open with the pain question, then listen: "When you're on a job or it's after hours and a call comes in, what happens to it right now?"
3. One-liner: an AI agent answers when you can't, captures the job details, and texts you the lead, 24/7.
4. Tease the Zoom as value, not a pitch: "Hop on a quick Zoom with me. I'll show you a few ways contractors are using AI to catch more jobs, and you'll test ours live from your own phone."
5. Book the Zoom live on the call: offer two concrete times (same day first, next morning second), send the invite while still on the phone, and confirm they received it before hanging up. The calendar link is only a fallback if they truly can't commit to a time.
6. Right after hanging up, text them the demo number and the invite: "Call this anytime. It's what your customers would hear."

TIPS

- Log every outcome: booked / call back / not interested / no answer.
- After three no-answer attempts, move them to the follow-up track.
- Show rate drops with every day of delay: same day beats tomorrow beats next week.

Stage done = Zoom booked with a confirmed time, or 3 call attempts logged.

Opener script

"Hi [name], it's [you] with Dispango. Quick one: when you're on a job or it's after hours and a call comes in, what happens to it right now?" ... "That's exactly what we fix. Hop on a quick Zoom and you'll test it from your own phone. I've got 4:00 today or 9:00 tomorrow. Which works? I'll send the invite now."

03 Demo & Trial

Deliver real value on Zoom, let them test the agent live, and start a one-week free trial.

DO THIS

1. Before the call, set the demo agent's lead-text destination to the prospect's cell number in the admin tool.
2. Open with 5 minutes of pure value: how contractors are using AI to win more jobs, from missed-call capture and after-hours booking to rental offices auto-booking apartment viewings. Teach, don't pitch.
3. Replay their pain from the cold call, in their own words.
4. The live test: they call the demo number from their cell while on Zoom, playing the customer. When they hang up, the structured lead text arrives on their own phone within seconds. Let that moment breathe.
5. Offer the trial: one week free, they forward busy and no-answer calls, they keep every lead captured, with no strings attached.
6. Start the trial before the Zoom ends if possible: set up call forwarding together and place one test call to confirm it works.

TIPS

- The value section makes the meeting worth their time, even if they never buy.
- The trial is also qualification: if their phone never rings, the product isn't for them, and that's fine.
- A trial that starts same-day converts better than one that starts next week.

Stage done = trial live, forwarding confirmed with a test call.

Trial offer

"One week free. You forward your busy and no-answer calls, the agent answers what you can't, and you keep every lead it captures. There are no strings: if it never rings, you've lost nothing."

Follow-up: the motion between stages

This is not a stage. Run it whenever a prospect stalls (didn't answer, didn't book, didn't show, went quiet during trial): 3–4 touches over about a week.

DO THIS

1. Same day: a short voicemail plus a text with the demo number and a 30-second recording of the agent handling a real call.
2. Day 2–3: send proof, a screenshot of a lead text with one line of math on what a missed job costs.
3. Day 4–5: a pattern interrupt, something human and playful that triggers a reply. Try a skeleton meme captioned “me waiting to show you the demo”, or “[Name], still want to stop missing calls or should I close your file?”
4. The breakup: mark the status and stop.

TIPS

- Creativity earns replies that professionalism alone does not.
- Always reference where they left off.
- No-shows get an instant “still good for today?” text and one re-book attempt before entering this sequence.

Assets

The two proof artifacts, the 30-second call recording and the lead-text screenshot, live in the sales folder. Attach the recording to touch 1 and the screenshot to touch 2.

04 Close

Turn trial data into a paying customer.

DO THIS

1. Review the trial together: how many calls the agent caught, at what hours, with the actual lead texts as evidence.
2. Do the math out loud: what one of those jobs is worth against the monthly price.
3. Ask for it plainly: "Want to keep it on?"
4. Send the agreement and take payment on the same call.
5. If the trial caught nothing, be honest: the product isn't a fit right now. Part on good terms and leave the door open. That protects our time and our reputation.

TIPS

- The trial did the selling, so the close is arithmetic, not persuasion.
- Don't discount on reflex; sell the cost of the missed job.
- A customer who gets no value churns anyway. Disqualifying is a win.

Stage done = agreement signed and payment active.

Value anchor

Review what the trial actually caught, then price against one missed job. Stop talking and let them react.

05 Onboard

Their system is live, their concerns are answered, and they know how to reach us.

DO THIS

1. Confirm the production setup: the business and agent names, inbound number, dispatch phone, and hours, all entered in the admin tool.
2. Confirm call forwarding is set on their line, then place a real test call and confirm the lead text arrives.
3. Walk them through their part: what the agent does, what they do when a lead text arrives, and how to reach us when something feels off.
4. Address every open concern before ending the call.
5. Book a check-in for day 3-5.
6. At the check-in, confirm leads are landing and make the referral ask: "Who else do you know running a shop like yours?"

TIPS

- Use the admin UI for all changes.
- Phone numbers in E.164 format (+1...).
- Their public number never changes; only forwarding does.
- Onboarding isn't done until a real test call has worked end to end.

Stage done = live system verified with a test call, client knows their part and how to reach us, day 3-5 check-in booked.

Tool

The admin tool (admin-ui page → admin API): create the client, send a test SMS, toggle active. Onboarding done = a correct clients row plus call forwarding set on their line.

Run it on a rhythm

Weekly rhythm

- Mon: build/refresh the prospect list
- Tue-Thu: cold-call blocks; book Zooms, same day when possible
- Daily: work the follow-up queue
- Wed-Fri: run Zoom demos; start trials before the call ends
- Daily: day 3-5 client check-ins as they come due
- Fri: close ending trials, onboard, review the funnel

Funnel to track

- Lists built → calls made
- Calls → demos held
- Demos held → trials started
- Trials started → converted to paid
- Converted → onboarded

The one number that matters

Trials started per week. Everything upstream (lists, calls, demos) exists to grow it; everything downstream (close, onboard) converts it. Review it every Friday.
